Just when you think things can't get any worse in Victoria hey presto! It now appears likely that a good portion of the ISIS brides and their children will be allowed to settle in? Victoria. Yes folks not only do we have regular protests, flags for every occasion, prayers on every corner...now we seem to be the home of families that supported terrorism!

I'm sorry but when does all this end?! We have a government that is so broken, that is so in debt, that continues to do as it pleases with little or no accountability and now we are to become the hone of ISIS brides?! Come onnnnn...enough is enough.

Now the lefty nut bags will be no doubt saying they're Australians and they have a right to come 'home', but let me ask you this, when there no homes for them because the housing project Andrews announced has failed will you want them at your house? Maybe next door? and then what of their kids...innocent now, but in 20 years?

As news cycles change we ask what's happening about the CFMEU corruption? Where's the outrage gone? And herein lies the issue, the state government relies on the news cycle moving on...and it is a disgrace!

And then we have one Danny Pearson! Oh Danny boy the pipes are piping and yours are full of crap. Gotta love Danny Pearson, the man who said Melbourne was gonna go off like a cold chisel cover band at the Burvale, the man who was once so bad at a press conference he was locked in the cupboard not allowed to speak and now the man who has done a $1 billion deal on data storage for Port Melbourne. Yes old Danny had 16 meetings with lobbyists and tech firms for Victoria to secure this massive data centre. And what a job he did?! The whole process was so smooth in fact that it greased through all the government and bureaucratic red tape in a mere 75 days! 75 days! How good is Danny Boy?! I mean how many other projects could claim that!? Not even a builder with ties to the CFMEU could get a building approval that fast!

Great job Danny! I'm sure you've got a great career post politics ahead of you...

While Danny has been out doing mega deals the CBD is still being bombarded by moronic protests and the King of the night, Cherry Bar owner, James Young has hammered the Allan government over their refusal to stop they protests. But hang on James, this is an election year so watch those protests stop in about August!

One Nation are now the preferred party in NSW! Yes the Pauline Hanson lead One Nation are leading in polling in NSW and the trick for Pauline is to maintain the rage. While Labor are out casting aside the significance of One Nation the simplest thing both sides could do to negate One Nation is to empathise with Australians...not exactly rocket science!

And finally, today I take a big step towards not being a fat middle aged dad. I've sold the kids! Sadly no, instead I'm going to my first Cross Fit class and I am not excited by it at all, but it's like giving away the fags. I loved smoking but knew how bad it was for me, I love junk food but it's bad for me so it's time to get fit again...my life is now officially ruined, but at least I might live a few more years and hold some of these people to account! If I'm not dead I'll see you tomorrow for part 2 of Fat Dad strikes back!

COMMON SENSE NOT SO COMMON

What happened to common sense? Was it taken away from us by lawyers and governments? Did we become dumber? Did we lose the ability to think for ourselves? Are we so easily lead nowadays we can't be trusted to make decisions for ourselves? Or has apathy become the norm?

Well really it's a combination of all of the above, but isn't it time we took some responsibility for restoring common sense as a basic principle of life? The ISIS brides issue is just another case of utter stupidity and a lack of common sense. There's no empathy for these people and while we can all show some for their children these are people who chose to follow terrorism. Australians with a sniff of English Patriality now have to jump through several hoops just to get into the UK and yet here we're allowing terrorist sympathisers to come 'home'?

Common sense when it comes to protests, common sense when it comes to how we make decisions, how we tolerate stupidity...there's zero common sense! The tragedy isn't just that common sense is rare. It's that when it does appear, it's treated like a disruptive influence rather than the bare minimum requirement for running a country, a council, or a conversation. In the age of endless expertise, the simplest solutions are somehow the most politically impossible and yet we allow it all to continue!

It is so easy to be a follower nowadays, but where are the people who say no thank you I'm going this way? Those are the people who know that for us to survive we need to bring common sense back to the table and make sure we aren't so easily fooled by those that show no regard for common sense solutions.

Bring back common sense I say because without it we may as well let the bots and the governments decide what our future looks like and then god help us all.

AI AND UBI? GET REAL!

Artificial intelligence is being sold to us like a shiny new espresso machine: sleek, efficient, life-changing. What they don't mention is that it might also quietly replace the barista, the accountant, the copywriter, and eventually the bloke who sold you the espresso machine in the first place.

AI isn't just another tech upgrade. It's automation on steroids with a PhD in pattern recognition and no need for sleep, sick leave, or superannuation. Entire industries are staring down the barrel of "efficiency gains," which is corporate code for, "Congratulations, you've been optimised out of existence." The promise is productivity. The reality could be hollowed-out job markets and a widening gap between those who build the machines and those replaced by them.

And then there's Universal Basic Income — the glittering solution floated by Silicon Valley's billionaire class. UBI is pitched as compassion: don't worry if the robots take your job, here's a modest monthly stipend, now go find meaning. It's the ultimate tech-bro fantasy. Automate the world, collect the profits, become trillionaires, and toss the public a digital allowance like pocket money for the unemployed masses.

What could possibly go wrong? Power concentrated in fewer hands. Governments reliant on private algorithms. Citizens reduced to data points in systems they don't understand and can't challenge. Innovation without accountability. Convenience without control.

AI could cure diseases and streamline chaos. Or it could entrench inequality at a scale we've never seen. The danger isn't the code itself. It's who owns it, who controls it, and who gets very, very rich while everyone else learns to live on the scraps. It's no wonder really that the likes of Albo and Allan love it all!
