Ley calls Wong out

EDITORIAL

Is there life in the Libs after all? Yesterday Federal Liberal leader, Susan Ley and former National Party leader, Michael McCormack absolutely lost their minds at Labor. Ley lost it over the disappearance of Penny Wong and McCormack over Albo's inability, he said, to understand what antisemitism is. While both Ley and McCormack made valid points what was actually on show was spirit, passion and anger. Politicians aren't actors and while they're told what to say, what to do, how to answer or not answer questions both Ley and McCormack showed real emotion and that's what Australians want! Yes of course the lefties are out saying how divisive and opportunistic the Libs are but really? What's wrong with some honesty? Some real emotion? The outrage from left wing media to the 'outbursts' was simply an industry in crisis and desperately trying to hold onto their relevance.

Why don't we see reaction to the racist bigotry from the likes of Peter Fitzsimmons, of Mike Carlton et al? People who pride themselves on being Australian but show about as much willingness to see another side to a debate as Hitler did marching into Poland. Extremism isn't just about violence and causing havoc, it's also about manipulating morality.

So while the lefties try to hang onto their power, their relevance and their moral superiority what have they done? They've called their celebrity mates to unite in the face of hatred. Cool! Now that is a good idea, because we are one, we are many and from all the lands on earth we come...you know the tune, but none these morally bankrupt donuts ask why we have allowed the country to be guarded by police with automatic weapons at major events. None the celebs question why we have concrete bollards around major transport hubs now, none of them have asked how we are seeing the radicalisation of young people in Australia and none of them have questioned why we have allowed hatred to be spread on the streets of our CBD's every weekend... isn't it funny how moral outrage only really comes about when blood has been shed and backtracking needs to begin. Shove your moral code and your stand against hatred, call this for what it is, antisemitism and a failure of governance.

Of course Bendigo Barbie couldn't help herself, she's got a five point plan to fight hatred! Although I'm sure Jacinta's polling data suggests she needs to be seen to be taking a stand on antisemitism she should probably make sure hubby doesn't know where the car keys are first! (Too low? Pfft, as if I care!)

And while we of course don't know where the Foreign Minister is, the environment minister, Chris Bowen is out announcing energy policy! Gas reserves in Australia so we don't run out of gas in winter, good plan Chris, but to the morons in your department who thought this could be a diversion tactic, think again and read the room!

Lastly to the sole remaining scum bag who took too many lives at Bondi, whose name we will never mention here, enjoy Long Bay prick.

PENNY WONG MIA

So where is the foreign minister? In the face of one of the most devastating events in Australian history, an event that despite the denials from the ABC that it was based on religion, the Foreign Minister has gone MIA.

Just on the ABC, the boss of the network has backed Laura Tingle on her statement that Bondi wasn't about religion. Just as a reminder to Marks and his woke organisation, the Bondi gunmen weren't picking off surfers, they weren't shooting people frolicking on the sand, they shot jews! Jews celebrating the beginning of Hanukkah...if the ABC wants to clarify that just have a look at the list of the dead, the dead that included a 10 year old girl.

I digress...so we have the foreign minister missing and we have to ask why? People aren't so stupid to think anything other than the fact of her stance on Palestine and the reaction she'd get, but yet there are no real reasons given. At a time of crisis we are unable to have a senior leader within the government to be in public, so much for the balance of diplomacy.

Wong, the rest of Labor and the Greens have been for the most part in hiding since the Bondi attacks because of their lack of support for the Jewish community, but this isn't about Israel and Palestine, this is about extremism, terrorism and the total failure of the Albanese government to protect Jews for the sake of votes.

Conflict in the Middle East has been going on for years and no one wants innocent lives lost but conflicts have lead to terrorism, wars against the west, men women and children willing to kill on both sides of the aisle for their own beliefs, that's what we need to fight against. Of course we want peace in the Middle East but it is not leverage for a political party to use to garner support.

Since 2020 more than 40,000 lives have been lost as a result of Muslim extremism. Yes we want to live in a united peaceful society but we do not want violence on our streets, we do not want more death and we do not want our elected representatives to be standing with the forces of evil that only want to disrupt the very fabric of who we are.

So have a nice Christmas Penny, we hope you have time to reflect on the situation and maybe it's time to think about getting out of foreign policy and into something like, community well being?

THE BRIEF

- The price of gold is now at an all time high which suggests people are thinking things might get worse before they get better! Gold will always be gold and will always have its value but housing, stock markets, bonds etc...all massively variable and it could be time to start panning for the good stuff again!
- In the wake of the US governments stand on migration President Trump has stopped the US green card lottery. That means the likes of you and I have pretty much zero chance of becoming a US citizen anytime soon...regardless of anything else you have to say the Don is putting his money where his mouth is.
- UK media and left wing outlet Novara Media has jumped on the bandwagon and suggested the right wingers, including Benjamin Netanyahu, are exploiting the Bondi tragedy for their own benefit. Yes it's true the conspiracy theorists are out and about but let's not make any mistake here, the lefties approach to Bondi is to make sure their moral narrative is preserved at all costs.
